Financing of WTSU athletics due regent eye in special meet

West Texas State University regents will meet in special session in early December to reassess the financial stability of the department of intercollegiate athletics.

Dee Osborne of Houston, a newly-appointed regent, said Saturday the regents will meet primarily to assess the financial status of the athletic program at the university.

He said Dr. Lloyd Watkins, university president, and Hermas Miller, financial vice president, met with him in Houston Thursday to discuss scheduling the meeting and the topic of the meeting.

"I don't know what the outcome of the meeting will be," he said.

The reassessment is apparently not connected in any way with the on-going controversy surrounding allegations made public this week by the university from the NCAA concerning certain alleged basketball recruiting violations.

Watkins, contacted Saturday, said only that "I expect the regents to take a look at the financial situation in intercollegiate athletics."

A year ago Athletic Director Gene Mayfield admitted to The News that the athletic department runs a deficit budget, but said he hoped the 1975 budget would be in the black.

This year's athletic budget was cut significantly when money was allocated by the administration.

The budget does not include nine-month salaries for athletic coaches, who receive the bulk of their salaries out of instructional salary funds.

The budgets for the university's two major athletic programs, football and basketball, were cut by almost $35,000 this year, according to budget figures filed in the university library.

Travel expenses, supplies and scholarship funds were cut by about $20,000 in the Buffalo football program for the year, the figures indicate.

A cut of about $13,000 will be experienced by the basketball team for the year, according to the budget.

The departmental budget for football at the university was cut from a 1974-75 level of $318,061 to a current level of $297,858.

While those salaries which are paid from the football department were hiked by $2,000 for the year, travel expenses were cut from $101,750 in 1974-75 to $97,000 in 1975-76. Scholarship funds were cut from $138,750 to $123,840.

The basketball departmental budget was cut from $121,604 to $108,926 for the current year. Cuts in the travel budget were from $46,880 to $39,900 and the supply budget was cut from $57,950 to $53,061. Scholarship funds were likewise cut from $30,000 to $25,800.

Athletic administration is budgeted $88,305, up from $51,367 budgeted in 1974-75.

The budget indicates nine months of salaries for coaches comes from the instructional salary fund of the department of health, physical education and recreation.

Board won't budge on land plea until after election, Keeling says

No action will be taken on a request by South Amarillo developers for Canyon school district to release several sections of land to the Amarillo district until after the Dec. 9 bond issue election, Board President Tom Keeling said Thursday.

The developers' proposals were made in October.

"We have no intention of doing anything until after the bond election," he said. "I'm not saying we're not interested and the time may come when we can release some land or will get something done on it."

Keeling said the board feels an expression of intention by the district concerning the developers' request might "hurt as much as it would help" in promoting the bond issue at the ballot box.

Opponents to the bond issue have cited as their major issue the refusal of the district board to act on the developers' request.

"There are so many other things, we decided to cool it until after the bond election," Keeling said. "We don't even know the legality of the thing and the only way is to test it."

Nevertheless, Keeling said, the board "definitely hasn't ruled out a trade or letting some (land) go."

Emmett Fuqua of Quen Sabe Investments in Amarillo, developer of a section of land near Coulter Road in the north part of the district, said last week he will make no move to force his request, either.

He said a plat for the development he plans has been approved by the planning and zoning commission of the City of

Amarillo "but that's as far as I can go until something happens."

Fuqua said he currently plans to wait on the school board to make a decision on his request.

"If there's no action, then we'll do whatever we can to get some action," he said, but he gave no time frame on when he might act.

Fuqua in October asked the board to release about three sections of development land owned by three developers just south of the Amarillo school district

Tuesday night at junior high

Bond issue community meet set

The first of two community-wide meetings scheduled to explain the upcoming school district bond issue will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the junior high auditorium.

The second meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 2 at the junior high. Both meetings have been called by local school officials to present information on the scheduled issuance of $6 million in bonds to finance construction of two new schools in the district.

Voters are to go to the polls on Dec. 9 to vote yes or no on the bond issue.

Mrs. Lois Hull, a member of a publicity committee formed by school board members to help formulate information for the public on the bond issue, said all citizens of the school district are invited to attend the two sessions.

"We'd rather have them come and ask their questions than not be knowledgeable about it," she said. "This is where they can get some answers."

Mrs. Hull said the program will be brief Tuesday night with School Board Pres. Tom Keeling giving an outline of what action the school board has taken in determining to call the bond issue election.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs is also expected to present background information on student enrollment figures and projections and the use of current facilities.

Following those presentations, she said, the meeting will open for questions from the audience.

"This is for information," she said, "to give any with a question the opportunity to ask the question of those who have the answers."

Some questions have already been anticipated by the school board and the questions have been both asked and answered in a four-page legal-size pamphlet mailed last week to taxpayers in the district.

The pamphlet mailing was the second mailing by the school district itself in the campaign for the bond issue. Earlier in the month, the district mailed a letter to all parents of Canyon school children

County, city fear problems

Lair plat due critical survey

A plat filed last week by Canyon Developer A.W. Lair for development of a portion of a section of land north of Hunsley Hills is expected to face critical scrutiny at city hall and possible rejection at the courthouse in the upcoming months.

Canyon City Manager Glen Metcalf said Lair filed the plat for development of 37 lots along one meandering street in the picturesque section which overlooks Hunsley Hills and Canyon a mile north of the city only after a Metcalf letter informed the developer of the legal requirements for plat approval by the city's planning and zoning commission and city commission.

While the development is not within the Canyon city limits, Metcalf said, it does lie within the city's extra-territorial jurisdiction and, as such, is subject to the city's zoning and development ordinances.

The development, as platted by Lair, would contain 37 initial lots ranging in size above 3 acres each. Currently, the section has no water and sewer facilities and only one home is occupied in the development. Another home is under construction.

Metcalf said the city asked

Lair to file a plat of the development "so we could try to get some control, which we need to have."

"Someday that will be in the city limits and if growth is not developed in a controlled manner, we're looking at problems which are similar to those in other areas Canyon and other cities have had experience with."

Metcalf indicated the city might anticipate future problems in the development with road construction and provision of water and sewer facilities.

The planning and zoning commission will give first consideration to the plat on Dec. 12 and following their perusal, the plat will go to the city commission for consideration.

"Then at this point," Metcalf said, "the option would be there as to whether the city would enforce and make it all conform to city ordinances or whether the city would grant a variance."

Metcalf would not speculate on what the city's stand will be after planning and zoning commission and city commission review.

But, Randall County Commissioner Paul Lindsey, in whose precinct the development lies, predicts the plat will face rough going when it is presented Randall County commissioners.

Lindsey, an outspoken critic of large land developers in the north part of the county, said the Lair development will pose the same kinds of problems to county

Jack Bullock, West Texas State University's faculty representative to the NCAA, talks with reporters during a called press conference held Friday morning to announce officially that the NCAA has alleged the university's basketball recruiting program has violated NCAA rules. An Amarillo businessman has taken the blame for the alleged violations.

'What did Kentucky offer him?' man in NCAA controversy asks

"If I offered him this much, then what the hell did Kentucky offer him?"

That was the question which lingered in the mind of Max Banks, an Amarillo businessman, Saturday morning as he mulled over his role in a recruiting effort which now has West Texas State University facing charges of recruiting violations from the NCAA.

Banks, a tough-talking former basketball player, said he accepts full responsibility for creating the situation which has now led to NCAA issuing a five-point allegation against the university's basketball recruiting of one basketball player.

"He was a real blue chipper," Banks said of the student, who is now playing for Kentucky after a high school career at Detroit, Mich.

"I tried to do right, but just did it wrong," he said. "There was no fraud involved. No deceitful intent."

But, Banks asks rhetorically, if the student rejected his offer to play at WTSU under Coach Ron Ekker, what kind of offer did Kentucky make to woo the student to the southeast.

Banks told The News of his involvement in an effort to recruit the young player to West Texas State and pictured it as an effort to bolster the basketball program to save it from possible downgrading or dissolution because of financial problems.

University officials formally released the NCAA allegations during a morning press conference Friday on the campus.

Banks said he learned of the availability of the Detroit player through Coach Ekker.

Later, after thinking through the situation, he said he approached Ekker about the possibility of recruiting the student "because I told him 'I'm tired of seeing you have to go through the misery you have to go through.'"

Banks said his motives were above reproach.

"I'm the guy that got the university in trouble," he said. "But, the reason is because I was rooting for the university and trying to get some quality players, and by quality players I mean good athletes, somebody who could grow up to be a good man and somebody who could graduate from college, not some bum."

Banks said he told Athletic Director Gene Mayfield and Ekker he would go after the Detroit player and attempt to recruit him as a non-scholarship player.

The thinking was, he said, that (See MAN, Page 14)

NCAA rules strict on prospect offers

The bulk of the allegations filed concerning West Texas State University's basketball recruitment of one student-athlete concerns the provision of transportation and entertainment to the student during last year's recruiting season, a perusal of the NCAA by-laws indicates.

Missouri Valley Conference rules parallel NCAA rules in respect to the providing of transportation and entertainment to prospects.

The following is a run-down on NCAA rules the association alleges WTSU violated in connection with the recruitment of a student athlete:

Over student evaluations

Council urges faculty boycott

The Faculty Council voted Friday to ask West Texas State University instructors to initiate a semi-boycott against use of the student evaluation of faculty.

The council, by an 11-1 vote, passed a resolution authored by Chairman Dr. Walter L. Shelly calling on faculty members to administer student evaluations beginning Monday if they desire, but to ask that their department heads hold the evaluations and not send them to the computer center for processing.

The resolution, which came just three days before student evaluation of faculty was to begin, was initiated, Shelly told fellow council members, because a university-wide tenure and promotion committee has refused to place guidelines on the use of the evaluations in determining faculty members who will be promoted or granted tenure.

Shelly's specific objection was to a vote taken by the university tenure and promotion committee to allow individual committee members to decide how much weight to give student evaluation when determining a faculty member's teaching effectiveness.

A controversy has been raging on campus since the opening of the semester over the use by university administrators and tenure and promotion committee members in determining teaching effectiveness when meting out promotions or tenure or merit raises.

Shelly charged Friday that the tenure and promotion committee's decision to allow individual committee members to determine the weight to be given student evaluations in the determination of a faculty member's merit "puts us back where we started."

The council has been discussing evaluations since its first meeting of the year in September and two weeks ago passed 15 resolutions to be recommended to the university tenure and promotion committee. Among the recommendations passed was one urging the committee to as-

The Canyon-Randall County American Revolution Bi-Centennial Committee approved Thursday three tentatively-planned projects for the first half of 1976.

The projects, if they materialize, would provide bi-centennial activities for young people, would feature the cultural history of the Canyon area and would provide historical data on the region.

One project given the go-ahead by the committee was presented by Claire Kuehn, who suggested a series of junior high and high school student-oriented activities on the West Texas State University campus.

Mrs. Kuehn proposed that various WTSU student organizations sponsor periodically on the campus, in the Activities Center, various activities for junior high and high school students from Panhandle area cities and towns.

She suggested it might be possible to arrange forensic activities, sports activities or just fun days for the area students.

But, she said she would coordinate the proposal with Student Body President Paul Thomas before finalizing plans.

Mrs. Mary Alice Hines received a go-ahead from the committee to pursue a project to decorate downtown store windows with historically-significant clothing and other items from Canyon pioneer families.

She said she had contacted

School board intent should be declared

One thing is not only clear, it is an absolute fact. That is that residents of the Gene Howe Elementary School area are as much a part of Canyon Independent School District as the folks who live across the street from Canyon High School.

It is untidy argument to oppose the school bond issue for $6-million to build new schools in the north part of the school district on the general premise that Amarillo residents should pay for schools to educate Amarillo children.

By law, a person's school allegiance or school affiliation is a matter not just of geography. It is most certainly, and this is true in the Gene Howe area, a matter of personal definition. Canyon residents opposing construction of new schools to the north fight a hollow battle when they try to define who should and should not be considered a part of the school district.

If it is irrefutable that the folks in Gene Howe area define their status in terms by whom their children are educated, and this seems to be the case, it is also irrefutable that their current school facility is overcrowded.

Gene Howe area residents need not justify their need for new facilities by arguing that they deserve new schools because of the tax input they have in the district as a whole. The matter is far simpler. The Canyon School Board has a legal and ethical responsibility to provide adequate school facilities and the responsibility extends to cover the location of schools as close to the people themselves as possible.

The bond issue proposed by the school board is a commitment to fulfill that responsibility.

Unfortunately, while all this is true, the school board has by its own volition allowed the issue to become complicated by a related problem.

In its failure to act one way or the other on the requests by developers of uninhabited property west of the Canyon expressway and adjacent the Amarillo School District near Coulter Road, the board has at least given credence to an implied commitment to educate now non-existent, but soon-to-be-expected student residents, of those areas.

The board is in the uncomfortable position of appearing to commit CISD to long-term involvement in the northwest portion of the district, a portion now undeveloped, because it has so far refused to tell developers and school district taxpayers its intent concerning the undeveloped property.

Superficially, and this appears to be the crux of at least a portion of the opposition argument against the bond issue, it appears the Canyon board desires to build new schools in the north part of the district, certainly to help relieve some over-crowding, but also to further commit the district to the education of future children who might live in the northwestern reaches. It appears this way because of the Canyon board's refusal to allow northwest Randall County developers to detach their property from the Canyon district and annex it to the Amarillo district.

As we've said before, if the board is holding out on a decision on the developers' requests simply to get more money in exchange for the decision, that is wrong. But, if that's not the reason for their refusal to decide the question, what possible reason can there be?

The school board could largely defuse the arguments of the bond issue opponents and could reassure us all if it would act as we have urged in the past and cede a good portion of land to the west of the Canyon expressway and north of Hollywood Road to Amarillo.

The district's commitment would then be obvious and the commitment would be one with which only the most parochial could argue. — C.W.

By CARROLL WILSON

The time is long over-due for a full reassessment of the financial underpinnings of the varsity football and basketball programs at West Texas State University.

His last year on campus, then-

Financial Vice President Virgil Henson warned that the athletic department was losing on the order of $100,000 per year and that eventually the money would run out.

Largely because of Cloyce K. Box, who ruled the university from a Dallas business building as chairman of the board of regents, the university has over-committed itself to pursuit of an athletic goal which cannot realistically be achieved.

Coach Gene Mayfield must have ulcers from worrying about how in the world he can recruit students to West Texas when other universities have far more to offer athletes.

Competition in the Missouri Valley Conference has been another ulcer-producer for Mayfield, who because of his difficulties in recruiting, cannot put together a team which can consistently produce victories in the conference.

As I noted earlier, the reasonable justifications for the existence of a football program at West Texas State have disappeared. It simply costs too much money for the return, to my way of thinking.

This does not mean that I would prefer to see the university without a football program. I think a program which is operated with some perspective and with reasonable business-like economic principles is a definite asset to the university, the town and the region.

But, in an era of cost-benefit studies, it's high time regents took a look at the hard, cold facts of athletic finances with a critical eye toward how much the program costs in comparison to how much it returns.

Indeed, university administrators will admit there is a certain double-standard when good cost analysis techniques are applied to academic programs such as physics but when they are not applied to athletics.

As a part of its get-tough policy in the state, the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System has mandated that WTSU and all other universities apply cost-benefit analysis to their departmental and operational budgets.

This, in a large measure has been done.

The plight of the WTSU physics department is an example. Over the past year, the physics department has faced a crossroads. On the one hand, the department had too few students in graduate studies.

A national accrediting association team told the university that either the department should have more faculty so it could attract more students and have more attractive programs, or that the masters degree program in physics should be deleted.

After perusing the cost-benefit ratio — that is the number of student dollars generated by physics related to the cost to operate the department — the university administration decided to delete the masters program.

In essence, physics folks complain, the administration decided the students must come before the expenditures could be increased. It's the "which came first, the chicken or the egg" syndrome. Without students, the program could not be expanded. Without program, more students would not come.

Essentially, the football and basketball programs are in the same plight. They cost more money than they raise. The bulk of the salaries for coaches is paid out of instructional funds intended for academic salaries. The bulk of operating income comes from mandated student service fees.

My stand is, essentially this: If it is good business to analyze the physics or any other academic department in a business-like manner, is it not also good business to scrutinize athletics in the same way?

I think it is and I'm satisfied that now that Dr. Lloyd Watkins is free from the desires of Box we'll see some accountability put into the athletic program.

Athletic reassessment long overdue

Our World

BY ANN BROWN

It is so much more pleasant to blame other people for our problems. The only flaw in this philosophy is that it never yet solved a problem.

If you call a plumber, you do not want him to tell you your pipes are leaking because the plumber who installed them did a poor job. Nor will you be satisfied if he merely tells you that you have not taken proper care of them.

What you want him to do is stop the leak. And he can't do that until he finds the source and repairs it.

Your parents may have given you a poor start in life through neglect or abuse. Your teachers may have given you false directions through erroneous instruction, poor instruction — or no instruction.

Your friends may let you down; your enemies may beat you down, and strangers may rob you.

You can sit down in despair, moan your life away, and blame all the people who have contributed to your problems; but few of them will know or care. Only you and the people who love you will suffer.

Yesterday is gone. We cannot bring it back if it were good, or change it if it were bad. Tomorrow may never come. Today is all we have, and it is too often crucified between the two thieves of yesterday and tomorrow.

The regrets of yesterday and the fears for tomorrow create such a heavy burden there is no energy left to cope with the problems of today.

The only thing we can do about yesterday is try to profit from some of the mistakes we made. And if we do all the things that should be done today, tomorrow will usually take care of itself.

There is no question that the child who had poor parents and poor teachers has been robbed. But one who has been robbed at gun point does not sit down and wall his life away over his loss, so why do so over emotional and academic losses?

The key to happiness is freedom, and the key to freedom is courage.

No one can be free as long as he is fettered by resentments, bitterness, and regret.

If your parents failed you, why harbor resentments? They may have done the best they were capable of doing under the circumstances.

And the poorest teacher may have put more effort and ambition into teaching than the one you valued most.

It is a strange law of nature that the three things people desire most in life — happiness, freedom, and peace of mind — are invariably obtained by giving them to someone else.

If your parents failed you, why not compensate by doing your best to give your children the love, guidance, and moral encouragement you would like to have had?

Education comes from books, life, and experience. If your teachers failed you, adult education is available in many forms.

Regardless of the source of your problems, no one is likely to try to solve them for you. Most people have all the troubles of their own they can handle.

Accepting the responsibility of your own problems, and doing your best with God's help to solve them may not clear them all up, but it's way ahead of the second-best plan.

Letter To The Editor

Gene Howe area parents defend school board, back bond issue

Dear Carroll:

We held off writing this letter until after we heard what Mr. Collins had to say at the meeting Monday night.

Now we feel like your readers should know the truth about statements that have been made.

Our school board has been called a "Missionary" board and "irresponsible." Mr. Collins stated that they were "irresponsible" because they wouldn't go along with the Amarillo School Board and give them all the land they wanted. Why should they? If Amarillo is running out of room to the south and west to build homes, (its kind of hard to tell the difference between the Amarillo School Board and the Amarillo Home Builders Assoc.) why don't they build to the north and east and bug Dumas and Pampa for a while?

If our board is so "irresponsible" why did we get a top rating in our students scholastic ability? Sure the teachers are basically responsible, but who hired those teachers and who approved the curriculum that they teach? The school board, of course!

Why shouldn't they spread "Canyon type education 'all around'?" That is their job. The children in the Gene Howe School are just as much their responsibility as the children from Umbarger, Sunday Canyon, Buffalo Plateau, and Canyon proper!

EVERYONE must realize that the people in the Gene Howe area will NEVER petition to be ceded into the Amarillo School District. It would take a petition of the majority of residents to be ceded and the approval of both Randall and Potter County School Boards to get rid of us. I promise you that this will NEVER happen.

People are moving out here now, much for the same reason that we moved out here 15 years ago. They want their children to have the benefit of an excellent education and still have easy access to their jobs in Amarillo.

We have paid our way for years in the CISD. We still do our part and more. Do you realize we pay 41 percent of the taxes, but we don't supply 41 percent of the students in the CISD?

Our children are not "forced" into a busing situation. We consider it a service we pay for. It is not "wasteful" or "in-

They moved to CISD schools

Dear Editor:

Several years ago when my husband and I decided to build a new home, we carefully considered many locations. We were seeking an area away from the noise and congestion of city living where our children would have plenty of room to grow and play.

However, because my husband is employed at Pantex and my employment requires frequent trips to downtown Amarillo, there had to be some limitation set on the distance away from the city that we could afford to move.

There are lots available in developed areas all around Amarillo, so finding one on which to build was no problem. Because we were planning to move primarily for the sake of our children, the most important consideration was the schools they would attend.

Not only were we unhappy with many situations existing in the Amarillo schools, but we were

Just as styles in wearing apparel and modes of transportation have changed over the years, so have the appearances of the front pages of newspapers and their coverage of the news. THE STAYER, a predecessor of THE CANYON NEWS, in its November 14, 1901 issue included weddings, advertisements, editorials and the Kansas City Stock Report.

Smith, Walker and Co. advertised a sale with dry goods "at cost." Beneath this ad Canyon Mercantile rejoined, "DON'T BE FOOLED. WE ARE NOT running a so-called clearing sale AT COST BUT WILL MEET ANY PRICES made by any so called sale and we go 'em a 'lettle' better on many goods. Nor is our house the DUMPING GROUND FOR THE HARD STOCK accumulated by other houses to run off at 20 to 25 per cent below cost."

There was good news and bad news in the following columns:

A DOUBLE WEDDING
On Sunday Nov. 17 at 7:30 p.m. Mr. James Coffee and Miss Ida Robeson, Mr. Sterling Coffee and Miss Jessie Robeson were united in marriage, Rev. T.F. Robeson, father of the brides officiating. In these happy unions every element of success and happiness seems blended. The charming brides are talented, accomplished ladies, trained by a most excellent mother and pious father, they have always walked the straight and narrow path of duty and honor, leading pure, quiet lives adorned with every feminine virtue. The young grooms are exemplary young men against whom no approach has ever been cast, they bear the reputation of being upright, industrious, high minded gentlemen. We extend our sincere congratulations and wish them a happy, useful life, crowned with joyous age that they may at last present themselves hand in hand before the gates of His glory to receive the reward of a well spent life.

As some comment on my action in resigning the office of county attorney has been made, I beg to submit a brief statement of facts and conditions as they confront me. The office is the most disagreeable one in the gift of the people. I have made enemies for myself and damaged my private business in performing my sworn duty. I have been the subject of unkind remarks and unjust ridicule. The religious and moral element of the county have not given me the support I expected and I am unwilling to longer hold an office to which so much unpleasantness is attached unless the salary is better.

Parents . . .

convenient." To the contrary, bus service is very "convenient." It is a 30-mile round trip every time we go to Canyon.

Mr. Collins made several remarks about the "Canyon Community" being put upon by the Gene Howe people. For your information, we consider ourselves very much a part of the "Canyon Community."

We have had three sons graduate from C.H.S. One son is now in the 8th grade in C.J.H.S. and the fifth son is a second grader at Gene Howe.

We have been involved with C.I.S.D. for 15 years. The oldest boy went to Rex Reeves from 2nd grade thru 6th. The next two attended Rex Reeves until Gene Howe was built. The two oldest boys earned their "Eagle" rank while they were members of Troop 66 in Canyon. They also earned their "God and Country" award while they were members of the First United Methodist Church. Both of us served on Cub Pack committees. Sherrie was Den Mother. Roy was committee-man. Roy served on the troop committee of Troop 66 as committee-man and advancement-man. We served Scouting in Canyon for 10 years.

We attended all of the football and basketball games the boys participated in. We have attended countless choir and band concerts. We have been active members of the Band Parents Club for 10 years. We served as presidents of this group 1974-75.

We have helped at three senior dinner dances and all-night parties. We were in charge of the one in 1973.

We have been involved with Canyon Little League and Babe Ruth League for 12 years. We plan to start all over again this spring with an 8-yr. old who wants to play Pee-Wee Ball.

How can anyone say that we are not a part of the Canyon community? There are many, many Gene Howe parents who are just as involved as we have been and are now.

We hope that all of the friends that we have made thru the years will keep an open mind and seriously consider voting for the bond election on Dec. 9.

There is a question and answer sheet out now. We have asked that the Canyon News give it as much consideration as they did Mr. Collins and his friends. If it isn't published soon pick up a copy from any school or at the administration building.

Fact I: Gene Howe School area is NOT leaving to go into Amarillo School District.

Fact II: Rex Reeves, Gene Howe, and Canyon High School are so crowded that it's a real inconvenience for teachers and students.

Fact III: Canyon is growing. Gene Howe area is growing. We need schools now.

Fact IV: If you own a $25,000 home, your 1975 taxes were figured this way: $25,000 x 40 percent of value equals $10,000 tax base with a tax rate of $1.92 per $100. Your tax was $192.

The 26 percent increase could be figured: $192 x 126 percent equals $241.92. That indicates an increase of $49.92 a year, or a little more than $4 a month. (These figures are quoted from the Question and Answer sheet about the bond issue.)

*We think that this is a reasonable price to pay for the continuing excellence of education offered our children.

Please vote "Yes" on Dec. 9.

Your Gene Howe friends,
Roy and Sherrie Cates

Wheelers Form Branch Here

A local branch of West Texas Wheelers, a group concerned with the problems of the handicapped, was formed Friday night in Canyon and Calvin Burtis and Johnny Henry, both of Canyon, were elected co-chairmen.

Forty-four persons attended the organizational meeting, 14 of them in wheelchairs.

The group decided to meet three to four times annually with the West Texas Wheelers group in Lubbock, parent organization for the local branch. The first such joint meeting will be in January at Plainview.

The local branch members will meet once each month at a date and place yet to be decided.

Dinner Set Today

Lucius Penick Post 5681 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and it's Auxiliary are sponsoring a joint meeting and Thanksgiving Dinner today, Nov. 23, at the Post Home, north of the city.

National FFA Honor Awarded To Hinders

A Randall County dairyman has received the highest award given by the Future Farmers of America.

Louis G. Hinders was presented the Honorary American Farmer Degree at the national FFA convention last week in Kansas City.

He was one of three Texans to receive the award and one of only two farmers to be honored. The majority of the 172 awards presented were given to agriculture educators and representatives from government and industry.

Hinders, nationally known for his registered Holstein cattle, has long been active in FFA work and agriculture education.

He is a frequent judge for contests and served this year at the FFA convention as a judge for the national FFA dairy production proficiency award.

He has served as an advisor to the FFA chapter at Boys' Ranch and as president of the Southwest United Dairy Industry Association, he has been a leader in promoting research.
Through UDIA efforts, basic nutrition courses have been included in the public school curriculum in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico and the dairy association has also worked closely with medical schools in Texas and Oklahoma.

Hinders' sons, David and Mike, were both state winners in vocational agriculture and his brother, Ray, was awarded the American Farmer Degree from FFA.

Ends Loose On Grant

City officials, notified this week that their application to HUD for funds under the Community Development Act is not complete, will try Monday night at the commissioners meeting to tie up the loose ends.

City manager Glen Metcalf said when the complicated grant application was filed several months ago, the city failed to include a map on which the low income sections of the city were located and a resolution authorizing Metcalf to sign block grant forms on behalf of the city.

A resolution giving him that authority will be introduced at the commissioners meeting.

After that, said Metcalf, the map and authorization will be sent to HUD offices in Dallas and the application will be complete.

City officials are expecting about 21,000 through the Community Development Act grant, if it is approved, with the funds to be used for paving several blocks in the west part of the city.

Also on the agenda Monday night will be approval of a new ordinance for water rates at West Texas State University, discussion of a change in the sewer lift policy to require developers to bear the entire cost of constructing new sewer lifts and final approval of the new civic complex.

Several zoning changes are also on the agenda.

Commissioners will meet at 7 p.m. in the Community Center.

Heritage Explored By Clubwomen

Reported by
MRS. MIKE MORRIS and MRS. DAN SANDERS

During the Bicentennial we in Canyon are especially interested in exactly what it is that has come to us from the past. Our heritage has several components: specific items from our forebears such as a quilt, or some acreage, or a hide-seat chair; something other than property such as how we govern ourselves, what we eat, how we earn our living, what we read and accept as valid, what we wear, whether we go to a church; and our status acquired through birth, for we are Americans, Texans, and Panhandle folks.

There are several elements of the independent American spirit. A healthy discontent with existing conditions here or abroad brought people to this country or moved the colonists to revolt; we still are discontent and strive to improve or change the way things are. Another trait of our independence is a willingness to work hard for self-gain and to grant to others — usually — the same privilege. A third element of our independence is a fierce desire to conduct our personal affairs as we choose, and to let others — usually — do the same.

As Texans, we have the historical tradition of once being a republic. The frontier philosophy of self-reliance is still strong, and the blessings of oil, cattle, minerals and foodstuffs enable us to maintain ourselves and help neighbors who may temporarily need assistance. Panhandle folks have a self-sufficiency and individuality fostered by our isolation from a government far down-state as well as a different climate and fewer people.

Something other than property in our heritage includes a form of government hammered out of strong convictions and high aspirations, through compromise. The Preamble to our constitution, written two-hundred years ago, embodies our goals toward which we continue to strive. Our best literature, from Emerson through Bellows, promulgates the importance of the individual and his right of choice. Art, drama, and music are universal, yet American efforts reflect the same ethic. In the area of religion individuality and option of choice is demonstrated to a high degree by the many sects and denominations in our land. Adherents of each feel theirs is best, yet we allow others — sometimes grudgingly — to practice, if at all, as they see fit.

Some people feel our individuality is being eroded by contemporary technology. Only in a few sites such as Williamsburg or a farm in Montana are the older methods of shearing, churning, printing, and plowing with oxen practiced. We hesitate to discard skills of the past, yet do we really want to return to drudgery, disease, monotonous diet, famine, and peonage or slavery? Today we are more interdependent than independent. We have no way to go but ahead.

When evaluating our heritage, we must remember that not only do we use what has come down to us, but we will pass it on, with our unavoidable contributions, to our descendants. We must be careful what we contribute. We are not mere passive recipients, but active formulators of a heritage which we hope they can accept with honor and pride.

Homesewing Makes Economic Sense

By BECKY HALL County Extension Agent

While most homesewers cite economic advantage as the reason for making their own clothes, other persuaders add fashion sense to the dollars saved.

Today's homesewer can be as fashionable as her couture-purchasing counterpart. Pattern styles change as frequently as current fashion trends. In fact, many well-known European and American designers create patterns especially for the major companies.

Also, over-the-counter fashion fabrics and inner fabrics offer homesewers the same quality and type of fabric available to ready-to-wear manufacturers.

Today's woman can sew faster and easier than ever by using clever, quick and easy techniques, along with new notions, tools and sewing aids — such as fusible products — which eliminate many steps toward garment completion.

Turning again to the economics of homesewing, making garments at home can save 60-70 percent or more, when compared to purchasing ready-made. Also fabric quality and workmanship are better and lower priced than similar-quality ready to wear.

Other frequently-mentioned motivations for sewing are better fit, a creative expression, individuality in coordinating style, fabric, and trim or designing ones own garment, and productive use of leisure time.

Quilted fabrics will make fashionable cold weather clothing this year.

Quilted vests and jackets, garment details such as yokes, pockets, collars or cuffs, and accessories such as hats and bags are in the limelight, she noted.

In buying quilted fabrics by the yard, consider weight, thickness and texture most suitable for the garment's design.

Also, the inside batting should be an even thickness throughout. The stitch length of the quilting threads should be short enough to avoid catching or snagging while wearing or cleaning. When stretched diagonally, quilting threads should give with the fabric without breaking," she pointed out.

Doing your own quilting can give custom or unique detail effect. Sandwich a lightweight batting, such as polyester fleece, between the fashion fabric and the backing of lightweight material, such as muslin. Baste layers together so they won't shift during quilting.

"Quilt by hand or machine, outlining designs in the fashion fabric or create an original design with matching or contrasting thread. A quilting foot on the machine is a useful and time-saving guide for stitching straight designs such as diagonal squares. Designs also can be marked or drawn on the backing fabric," the specialist said.

Other sewing hints especially helpful with quilted fabrics include:

- Experiment with machine pressure, tension and stitch length adjustments to achieve the most satisfactory stitch.
- Always finish quilting before laying and cutting out the pattern since quilting reduces the size of the fabric.
- Eliminate extra bulk in seams and darts by trimming away the batting layer in the seam allowance.

BSP's Chi Upsilon Chapter Conducts Business Meeting

Chi Upsilon chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority met Tuesday evening, Nov. 18, at the home of Jeri Rozell with Carol Whitney as co-hostess.

Nell Haws, chapter president, was in charge of the business meeting as plans were developed for a progressive dinner party for members and husbands to be held December 6.

The dinner party was scheduled to begin with cocktails at Nell Haws home at 7 p.m. on Dec. 6 and progress to Sherri Montgomery's home for the dinner at 8 p.m. with a gag gift exchange to conclude the evening at Jeri Rozell's at 9 o'clock.

The chapter also made further plans for a boot raffle with tickets to be drawn for the winner on Dec. 10.

The membership filled in consumer preference questionnaires on beef for Glenda Shupler, a West Texas State University student.

Sandy Martin and the chapter's social committee were commended by the chapter for the recent honor our mother's dinner held Nov. 11 at Richard's Steak House.

Winning the chapter door prize at the meeting Nov. 18 was Marlene Howell. Other members present were Carol Ratliff, Sherri Montgomery, Patti Hargrove, Nell Haws, Carrie Bertrand, Carol Whitney, Sandy Martin, Vi Taylor, Janice Adams, Ruth Wilcox and the hostess, Jeri Rozell.

Next chapter meeting will be December 2 at Patti Hargroves home at 7:30 p.m. with an executive board meeting preceding at 7 p.m.

Class Reunion This Week

The Canyon High School Class of '65 will be conducting a Thanksgiving class reunion during the weekend with activities to begin Friday night at 6:30 as registration begins at the Canyon Community Center.

The registration will be followed with a supper for the classmates, and reminiscing.

Women's Chamber Plans Next Meet

A formal evening for the members of the women's division of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce is being planned for December, according to Dianna Gheer, president.

Chorale To Tour Wales

Approximately 45 members of the West Texas State University

Chorale will get a taste of international culture when they travel to Wales for the Llangollen International Musical Eisteddfod July 6 thru 11, 1976.

Directed by Dr. Hugh Sanders, WTSU professor of music, the Chorale will be one of 200 choirs from 30 or 40 different countries to perform.

The Chorale will leave the United States on July 4 and arrive in London July 5. They will travel to the small Welsh town of Llangollen July 6 and perform in the festival.

Contesting choirs will be required to sing two selections from the chief European school of composition and one original song from their country.

First place winners will be awarded an international trophy and a cash prize for their organization. Cash prizes will also be awarded to second and third place winners.

Folk song and dance parties will perform for the guests of the festival.

The competition was established in 1947 with 40 choirs from 14 countries participating.

After the festival, Chorale members will visit Leicester, an industrial city in England on July 12. Leicester is the traditional residence of King Lear and his daughters and the city of Leicester Abbey.

The Chorale will visit Cambridge, a university town, on July 13 and 14 where they will be presented in a concert.

NOTE . . .

The Canyon School Board is the only taxing authority in this area that has refused to allow a $3000. homestead tax exemption to persons over 65 years of age.

The above pictured home has been assessed school taxes for over 35 years. Most people over 65 have educated their children and their children have educated their children — Don't you think it's time to give them a break on school taxes?

The voters of this District voted FOR this issue in the statewide election, but the Canyon School Board has rejected the plan saying "Most CISD taxpayers over 65 are affluent and can afford to pay the full tax."

THIS HOMEOWNER AND DOZENS MORE LIKE HER SHOULD NOT BE PAYING ANY SCHOOL TAX.

Are we this desperate for taxes to build schools we can't afford and don't need. ?

Remember, these new taxes also apply to your auto, farm, farm equipment or business property.

Advertised Increase	49.92 +26%
Advertised New Tax *	241.92

Following is an exact quote from the School Board's so-called "Fact Sheet" . . .

Patrons need to remember, however, that these figures are based on the current appraisal value. The citizens' committee for sound financing has recommended that the tax office revise property assessment formulas to current market values, that property tax values be placed on the tax rolls at 100% of the assessed value of the property, and that the school board set tax rates adequate to meet the current budget. Of course, 100% valuation would mean that tax rate would be lowered. If those recommendations are followed, it is impossible to determine at this time exactly what increases may occur, but every attempt will be made to keep the increase at a minimum.

* What Will It Really Cost?

This 26% does not include anything for construction cost overruns, for many needed items, for inflation, or for ANY costs of operation.

They will have to come back for more — time and again as Amarillo continues to grow and our School District is caught up in a never-ending quagmire of financial problems. Let's let Amarillo taxpayers bear these problems!

alerted the Carlies, who would go return their wandering pet to his new quarters. Jacque even chewed through the wire on a pen they built for him to get back to his old back yard. But finally, after several trips, he has apparently decided "you can't go home again" and is staying put. Much to the relief of the Carlile family.

LTC AND MRS. Charles Laakso are expecting a houseful of company for Thanksgiving. Carol and Brenda, two of their three daughters, will be here for the holidays from school. Also visiting will be two of Chuck's brothers and their families: Frank and Dolores Laakso from Harlington and their daughter, Pam, a freshman at the University of Texas, and Dick and Margaret Laakso of Dallas and their sons David, Matthew and Byron.

R.O. McKAY is in St. Anthony's Hospital at Oklahoma City for knee surgery in Room 7712.

MRS. CECIL (DORIS) Bosley of Canyon is being cared for at Medi-Park Center, rather than being hospitalized, after suffering a stroke this past week.

IF YOU'VE TAKEN a trip, entertained visitors, had a party or done something that would be of interest, please give the Phone Line a ring at 655-7121. We'd like to let the Sunday News readers know.

Welch and J. Mack White.

The Gold Star award is intended to stimulate winners to higher achievement and to encourage other young people to participate in the county 4-H program.

Gold Star honorees representing Randall County were Jill Leavitt and James Irlbeck.

Miss Leavitt, 16, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M.K. Leavitt of Rt. 2, Happy. She is a sophomore student at Canyon High School and active in the business club and Future Homemakers of America at the school. In 4-H activities, she received a second place for sheep breeding at the county show last spring and has also been involved in sewing and cooking projects and was a member of the grass judging team.

The 4-H Gold Star Boy, James Irlbeck, resides 12 miles south of Canyon and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Irlbeck. He is also a sophomore student at CHS and active in the Future Farmers of America chapter there and the Youth Fellowship group of the First United Methodist Church of Canyon. In 4-H activities, Irlbeck, 15, has had projects involving swine, beef cattle, sheep and was on the 4-H teams for safety and livestock judging.

Both Miss Leavitt and Irlbeck are members of the Jowell 4-H Club. To be eligible for the Gold Star recognition each 4-H student is judged on outstanding achievements, leadership and overall contributions to the county 4-H program. To qualify for the special Gold Star award in their county, a 4-H student must be at least 13 years of age and have at least three years of club work being currently active in 4-H club activities.

Listed students have access to the Reference-Placement service offered by the Who's Who program. The program will prepare individual letters of recommendation or supply the student's employer with necessary biographical material upon request.

Crop Judges Win Honors

The West Texas State University Crops Judging Team returned from Oklahoma State University and the Southwest Region Crops Judging Contest with high honors this last weekend.

According to Dr. Leonard Wilson, WTSU plant science professor, the team came out on top in all three phases of the two-team contest with a score of 5096.4 out of a possible 5400 points. The events involved were plant identification, seed analysis and commercial grain grading.

Senior plant science major Troy Ritter of Groom was the high individual in the identification phase of the competition, while Lynn Clay, a junior from Nara Vista, N.M., was second high individual in commercial grain grading. Sophomore Marco Rodriguez, a foreign student from Columbia, was fourth high individual and placed second in seed analysis.

This is the first year for the southwest region contest, with teams from WTSU and OSU competing.

The three-man team will compete in the American Royal Intercollegiate Crops Contest on Nov. 18 in Kansas City. They bested 11 teams from major agriculture schools in the nation in 1972 in that event. The team will also travel to Chicago for the Intercollegiate Crops Contest on November 22.

The Kitchen Sink

By SUSAN WILSON

Thanksgiving — already! How can Turkey Day be here while I'm still picking up Halloween candy wrappers and cutting Trick or Treat chewing gum out of hair and prying orange suckers off the back of hubby's best suit coat?

All this week women everywhere will take hours and hours to prepare the big feast for Thursday — only to be devoured in 15 minutes so husbands everywhere can watch football on TV. There's something less than joyful about the preparations. Weeping over the onions for the cornbread stuffing. Sloshing pumpkin pie mixture about. Wrestling with a still half-frozen turkey. Boiling the offensive-looking giblets. Forgetting the dish of cranberry relish in the refrigerator.

With the kids licking spoons and poking fingers and milling around underfoot it's easy to forget what the day is all about. To me, the day is about all days. To remind me about my everyday blessings. So for this Thanksgiving I offer a housewife's prayer.

Dear Lord,
Thank You for the hustle and bustle of everyday life. I complain a lot about being so busy — but I know that what I am busy about is life itself.

Thank You for these stacks of dirty dishes. Yes, even the skillet that will take an hour to scrub.

We eat well. And often. And too often we forget that these dirty dishes are symbols of Your bounty.

And, thank You for these loads of laundry. The soft warm towels, the little white socks, the dirty overalls. My home is filled with people that I love. Even as much as I hate folding clothes; an empty laundry hamper would make my heart ache.

Thank You, too, for this rocker

I sit in. The seat is worn from rocking my three babies, and there are tooth marks on the wooden arms from the girls' first teeth. I have held fussy babies during colds, and ached for sleep. And I have rocked and nursed sleepy, happy babies and ached that their infancy was all too short.

Thank You for hubby's clutter. His clothes scattered here and there. The toothpaste tube squeezed in the middle. His multitude of notes on matchbook covers and paper napkins. He puts up with so much more from me.

And thank You for these little shoes in the middle of the living room where they were quickly

Hinders represents Associated Milk Producers, Inc., on the Federation Board and was first elected to this post in 1969.

The National Milk Producers Federation is a farm commodity organization representing nearly all of the several hundred dairy marketing cooperatives serving this nation.

shed after kindergarten. How fast those feet are growing! Help me, Lord, to grow with her. But don't let me forget how hard it is to be little. Or how much fun it is. Help me, Lord, to guide her feet in Your ways.

And, thank You, Lord, for these few quieter times. Thank You for the warm soothing cup of tea, and the printed word, and the sleeping children. It gives me time to think and be grateful. And I am, O, Lord, I am.

Amen

Board Okays Land Transfer

A year after their original order, Randall County School Trustees Thursday finalized the transfer of 160 acres of South Amarillo development land to the Amarillo School District from the Canyon School District.

Trustees also instructed officials from both school districts to get together before Dec. 11 and work out an agreement on how much Developer Glen O'Dell will have to pay the CISD for loss of tax revenues for the next four years.

The loss of revenue payment was the only point of confusion and potential disagreement during the hour-long trustee session as they voted unanimously to allow the land transfer, approved plats of both districts with the acreage transferred and approved a formula for figuring the amount of money the AISD must pay the CISD for loss of bonded indebtedness revenue due to the transfer.

Trustees had originally approved a petition for the transfer presented by O'Dell in Oct. 1974. The Canyon school board objected to the transfer and appealed the trustee decision to the state education commissioner, who ruled this fall that the trustee decision would stand.

WT, Senior Citizens Talk Sharing Of Old Amarillo Library Building

Officials from West Texas State University and the Amarillo Senior Citizens Association began negotiations Friday on an agreement which will next summer give both groups access to the old Mary E. Bivins Memorial Library building in Amarillo.

The university plans to use the facility primarily at night for the offering of evening courses, while the senior citizens need the building's use during the days.

Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, WTSU president, said if the necessary agreements are reached the university should be operating its Amarillo center from the old library building next fall.

Amarillo city commissioners approved a compromise between the two groups during their regular session last week and instructed WTSU and the ASCA to come to terms in a contract for final approval by the commission later.

Keith Winter, WTSU director of development and author of the compromise proposal, met with senior citizen officials Friday and reported later in the day the sessions were fruitful.

Winter said the city commission will lease the building to the university for $1 per year and WTSU will in turn lease the building to the senior citizens for daytime use.

Currently, the university offers night courses to Amarilloans on the Amarillo College campus and at Bonham Junior High School.

Watkins said although the acquisition of the building will give the university a single thrust in to Amarillo, the university will not substantially alter the scope of the coursework to be offered at the center.

He anticipates some expansion in numbers of courses to be offered, but said the university will continue to offer only upper division and graduate courses in keeping with a gentleman's agreement of non-competition with Amarillo College.

Moved . . .

also aware of the reputation of the Canyon schools for superior education.

This year our daughter is a sophomore student at CHS, one son is in the eighth grade at CJHS and the other son is a sixth grader at Gene Howe School.

All three children had "A" averages on their first report cards of this year. This in itself makes us glad that we moved into the Canyon Independent School District.

I have enjoyed working with the Gene Howe PTA and am honored to serve this year as president of that organization.

Our family actively supports the scholastic and extracurricular activities of our schools, as do the vast majority of our neighbors and friends in the Gene Howe area.

Because the people and businesses in the Gene Howe area pay 41.03% of the total tax revenue of the Canyon Independent School District, I definitely do not feel that we are being "given" anything. Nor do I feel that we are taking advantage of the people who live in Canyon.

We do a great deal of our shopping in the city of Canyon. We have many friends who live in the city of Canyon.

Our home may lie within the city limits of Amarillo, but our loyalties are in Canyon.

ministration, school tax officials, both here and in other counties and making a sincere effort to inform myself, I concluded that the real reason for the formation of these committees was to muster widespread support for the passage of the bond issue. At that time the amount being considered was approximately $3,000,000.

We are now confronted with twice that amount, or $6,000,000.

Mr. Reeves, I fully understand the need for additional facilities for our children. I also share with you the belief that we have the same obligation to children in all areas of the county. Our disagreement is in what amount is necessary to achieve the common goal. I think the great majority of the dissenting taxpayers would suggest a bond issue of a more modest amount. The question of what to do about the land transfer in the northern part of the county should also be resolved before any bond issue is proposed. I believe the tax increase on the $6,000,000 proposed issue will be much closer to 40 percent than the suggested 26 percent.

We as individuals have to deny ourselves some of the things we would like to have, and in some instances actually need. If we are to be responsible citizens to our school and community, can we ask any less of our school district?

Please delete my name from your committee list immediately, and I further suggest that you poll the other names individually before submitting their names as blanket endorsement of this irresponsible proposal.

Yours truly,
Chas. E. Gerald

Tennis Tourney For Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving weekend will be tennis time for local residents who wish to enter a tennis tournament at the T-Bar-M Racquet Club, Amarillo.

Residents may enter the tournament by contacting Carl David Ramirez at 353-5555 before Wednesday.

I am in favor of the proposed bond issue for one reason — I want OUR school district to continue to be the best one in the state.

If the bond issue is passed and new schools are built, only our youngest child will benefit directly, and then only for possibly two years.

But my husband and I will gladly pay the increase in our taxes, knowing that everyone in the community benefits when quality education is offered in its schools.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kyle (Karolyn) Farmer

HOW'S The Electric Company DOING?

Let's ask J. T. Burk, stores superintendent . . .

"Crossarms are such a common sight that you probably don't even notice them. But we have thousands of crossarms in our system . . . and they're necessary to bring electricity to you. Ten years ago, one of these crossarms cost $3.43, but today an identical crossarm is $11.46."

That's a whopping 234% increase . . . a reason electricity may be costing you more these days. Even so, electricity is still a big bargain . . . because it's always there when you need it.

it would be less strict to recruit the player as a non-scholarship athlete than as a scholarship athlete.

He said Ekker called the NCAA to confirm the procedure they'd planned for recruiting the player and were given the okay to do so.

Banks confirmed then offered the player a job and his wife a job in his firm, and also travelled to Detroit to recruit the player.

He said he will try to go before the NCAA Committee on Infractions early next month to testify on behalf of the university.

The Amarillo businessman said he was motivated to try to help the university obtain the player because he fears the administration is trying either to downgrade athletics or do away with athletics at the university. He said he was also concerned about the lack of interest in the athletic program, particularly basketball, and thought good players would help attract a larger crowd, which would, in turn, produce more revenue to stabilize the athletic budget on a non-deficit basis.

Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, university president, said Friday morning he considers the five allegations leveled at the university by the NCAA "not of a serious nature."

"I feel certain there was no intent to do anything contrary to the regulations of the NCAA," Watkins said prior to a press conference called at 11:30 a.m. Friday to reveal the nature of allegations leveled at the basketball recruiting program by the NCAA two weeks ago.

The allegations grew from an investigation conducted by the NCAA earlier this fall, according to Jack Bullock, WTSU's faculty representative to the national association.

Both the NCAA and the Missouri Valley Conference have conducted investigations into the alleged recruiting violations, Bullock told members of the press at the conference, and both have rendered similar alleged violation charges.

The university will answer the charges to the NCAA by letter prior to Dec. 8 and to the MVC in person on Dec. 4, Bullock said.

Bullock said the university is now conducting its own investigation into the allegations prior to framing a suitable reply to both groups.

Based on his investigation so far, an investigation which he said began last Monday, Bullock said "we will be refuting part of them (the allegations)."

The university's answer to the charges will not be made public by WTSU, Bullock said.

The NCAA allegations charge that WTSU violated five provisions of the association's constitution and by-laws in recruiting practices directed at a prospective player and his wife.

The list of allegations released by Bullock Friday is as follows:

"The university failed to apply properly the Principles of Institutional Control and Responsibility to certain representatives of the university's athletic interests;

"Certain representatives of the university's athletic interests recruited a prospective student-athlete with the promise and/or provision of improper inducements;

"The wife of a prospective student-athlete was provided improper entertainment during a visit to the university's campus;

"Two members of the university's basketball coaching staff provided improper transportation to a prospective student-athlete and the young man's wife;

"Two representatives of the university's athletic interests provided improper transportation and/or entertainment to a prospective student-athlete and the young man's wife;

"While recruiting a prospective student-athlete, two representatives of the university's athletic interests expended funds other than necessary for their own personal expenses.

Bullock told The News he considers the charges of less than a serious nature.

During the press conference, he would not elaborate on the specifics of each allegation.

But, he indicated that it is against NCAA and conference rules for prospective student-athletes to be taken to Amarillo for a meal or for any kind of entertainment.

Bullock told The News one reason he believes the charges are less than a substantial nature is because of the length of time it has taken the NCAA to take action on the allegations.

Neither Bullock nor Ekker would say during the press conference who initiated the charges against the university's basketball program. Bullock indicated he did not know who had initiated the charges.

Bullock was critical of what he termed the stringency of the regulations regarding entertainment of prospective athletes.

He said it is tough for a school geographically located as is WTSU to provide transportation and entertainment for prospects under the rules.

Ekker had no comment originally at the press conference on the charges, but later said in response to a question that his coaches were knowledgeable of NCAA and Valley rules and regulations.

"We do our best to have a thorough knowledge of the rules," he said. "We do our best to know and interpret them correctly."

Bullock said he had no idea any allegations concerning recruiting violations had been made to the NCAA until the association began its investigation about a month ago.

He said the investigation and its ramifications were not made public earlier because "we did not want to hurt our program."

Watkins told The News Friday he had not put any "gag rule" into effect concerning the allegations.

"I have asked them (Ekker, Athletic Director Gene Mayfield and Bullock) to use their judgment in discussing this matter because it does pertain to individuals whose privacy must be respected," he said.

Mayfield told The News Friday morning he considers some charges "are of a serious nature and some are not."

He said he expects MVC action on the allegations to parallel action by the NCAA.

If the NCAA finds against the university's program on the charges, it can take several steps of punishment, according to the current NCAA manual.

The association can, for example, simply issue a private reprimand to the university.

More stringent punishments would include a year probation, ineligibility for championship events, ineligibility for post-season events, prohibition of recruitment for a specified period, prohibition against participation against outside competition, or reduction in the number of scholarships which can be issued.

solicit the enrollment of any prospective student-athlete at his institution by giving or offering to give financial aid or equivalent inducements, except such aid as is permitted by this Association and his institution and the conference of which it may be a member."

BY-LAW 1-5-(d)-3 — "No member institution shall permit its athletic staff members or other representatives of its athletic interests to pay or arrange for the payment of the transportation costs incurred by relatives or friends of a prospective student-athlete to visit the campus or elsewhere. . . . In all instances, entertainment of the party accompanying a prospective student-athlete to the campus shall be limited to his parent (or legal guardian), and a given prospect's parents (or legal guardians) may be entertained for one and only one visit. Such visit shall not exceed forty-eight hours."

BY-LAW 1-5-(e) — "An institution, or representatives of its athletic interests, may provide entertainment for a prospective student-athlete, his parents (or legal guardians) at the institution's campus only. Transporting a prospective student-athlete to any other site for any purpose is not permissible. Further, it is not permissible to entertain other relatives or friends of a prospective student-athlete at any site. A prospective student-athlete visiting a member institution's campus shall live and take his meals as regular students normally do. If campus facilities are not available, local commercial facilities may be used, but at a scale comparable to that of normal student life. His entertainment shall take place on campus; however, if on-campus entertainment is not available and it is necessary to entertain a prospective student-athlete off-campus, a student host may be provided with a maximum of ten dollars for each day of the visit to cover the cost of actual and necessary entertainment expenses. No member institution may arrange for or permit excessive entertainment of any prospective student-athlete on the campus or elsewhere. The institution (or representatives of its athletic interests) shall not provide cash to the prospect for entertainment purposes and shall not provide an automobile for the use of the prospect or a student host."

The NCAA on several occasions has interpreted this rule strictly. One interpretation, for example, allows the institution to entertain a prospect's parents off-campus but only if entertainment is not available on-campus and only if costs are commensurate with on-campus entertainment costs. Another provides that if the student is housed in a motel due to a lack of housing on-campus during his visit, he must eat his meals on-campus if facilities are available.

BY-LAW 1-5-(f) — "A member institution's athletic staff member or other representative of its athletic interests may visit a prospective student-athlete or his relatives at any location for recruiting purposes. However, on any such visit, neither the staff member (nor any representative of the institution) may expend any funds other than necessary for his own personal expenses."

BY-LAW 4-6-(d) — "This by-law requirement, according to Jack Bullock, WTSU's faculty representative to the NCAA, requires a school's representative to certify twice each year as to the eligibility of student-athletes and also to certify that no violations of NCAA rules have occurred. Bullock said the allegation resulting from this alleged violation is due to his signing the certification without knowledge any alleged violations had occurred this year. This by-law violation allegation, he said, also refers to the alleged violation of the constitution of the NCAA which requires proper university control over athletic recruitment.

sign student evaluations a weight of no more than 50 percent when attempting to determine teaching effectiveness.

Shelly said the university committee took action to negate the council's recommendation even before the council had actually voted on the recommendation on Nov. 7.

Reading from the minutes of the university committee's meeting of Nov. 7, Shelly quoted Dr. John Green as moving that each individual committee member assign his own weight to the student evaluation results when perusing teaching effectiveness.

Then, Shelly said, the committee concurred in their Nov. 7 action when the issue came up again on Nov. 11.

"It seems to me this is the key issue the faculty is trying to drive home," he said. "Not whether we'll be evaluated, but how they're (student evaluations) to be used."

Shelly charged that the committee's action would result in the same kinds of controversial personnel decisions which originally caused the current furor last spring.

"If the tenure and promotion committee, if they have the ability to determine how much weight will be given student evaluations, or to peer evaluations, or to ex-student evaluations, or whatever, then we're right back where we started from," he said.

"What are we trying to do?" Bob Muir, a business professor and the lone dissenting vote on the resolution, asked.

"Ray Malzahn has been the one man who has emphasized that everything be in black and white," Shelly said. "Now we give him the numbers and they reject it. There's no accountability whatever."

"If it remains as it is, that committee can be arbitrary and they don't have to be accountable."

Shelly said he had discussed the problem with Malzahn but found no willingness in Malzahn to budge on the point.

He said the council is to meet informally Monday afternoon with Malzahn, vice president for academic affairs and chairman of the university tenure and promotion committee, to discuss the problem.

The resolution passed by the council reads:

"Whereas, the Faculty Council must have the support of the faculty if it is to be an effective spokesman for the body, and

"Whereas, the Faculty Council has consistently attempted to communicate the feelings of the faculty concerning the use of student evaluations to the Academic Vice-President, Chairman of the Tenure and Promotion Committee, as well as to the Committee itself, and

"Whereas, the Faculty Council has not received an acceptable response from the Tenure and Promotion Committee and its Chairman, as to the weight which will be given to the student evaluation,

"Be it resolved, therefore, that the Faculty Council strongly urge that faculty members who desire to participate in the student evaluation use the student evaluation questionnaire and then request that the department chairman hold the student evaluations at the departmental level and not forward them for processing until the question of the use of the student evaluation is satisfactorily resolved by both the faculty and the Tenure & Promotion Committee and its chairman, the Academic Vice-President."

Some instructors have apparently already begun administering student evaluations to their students although evaluation was not to begin until Monday. The evaluations are voluntary.

In other business Friday, the council heard Terry Jo Reynolds of Canyon, a student at WTSU, testify that most students do not take the evaluation of faculty seriously.

urging their support of the bond issue.

Since that time, a committee of citizens for the bond issue has formed and is now running advertisements in the local newspaper.

A committee against passage of the bond issue has also formed and has held one meeting.

The school board plans to construct a new high school and a new elementary school in the north part of the district with the $6 million bond issue.

If the issue is authorized by voters, construction could begin on the elementary school in 1976. Construction on a new high school is anticipated at a later date.

The bond issue would also pay for some remodeling and renovation of Canyon High School.

The school board has studied the possibility of two new schools for two years. Earlier this year they appointed two 30-member citizens committees to study the problem of school space. Both committees recommended new schools be constructed.

Current architectural designs call for the elementary school to house about 500 students and the high school to house about 700 students.

and city government in the future he anticipates from other developments in rural areas north of Canyon.

Lindsey's primary concern is with the construction of roads in the development, construction which he says is sub-par.

The road now in existence in the development, a black-topped surface, does not meet county road specifications, Lindsey said.

"I talked to him about it before they did that road and they went ahead and did it anyway," Lindsey said of Lair. "He knows it's not according to our specifications at all."

Lindsey said he will not favor approval of the road in the development for county road maintenance when the plat is presented to the county for approval.

"I'm not even sure we'll approve the plat," he said.

"Because sooner or later the county will be stuck for the roads."

Lindsey said other county commissioners have also been in the development to observe the road and they agree that it does not meet specifications.

The commissioner had repeatedly fought the approval by commissioners of development plats when streets and roads do not meet county specifications, specifications which Lindsey initiated two years ago.

Lair, a Canyon attorney, is currently developing Hunsley Hills subdivision north of U.S. 60.

Keeling told The News, though, following the meeting that the $100,000 figure might not be enough money.
